foot thick. There must therefore be something of value in it.

We are warm friends, both from theory and practice, of the Double Michigan or Sod and Subsoil plow. Most of our readers know this to consist of two ploughs on a single beam, the small one in front of the other, in operating, taking off about five inches of the surface soil, letting the hinder plough lift and put immediately on the top of this, seven to nine inches deeper. "But" say some, "would it not be better merely to stir and loosen this, without bringing so much yellow stuff to the top?" Our answeris. No: if it was rich soil, we might let it lay there, and the roots would find it, but being comparatively poor, we cannot afford this, but must have it on the surface, where we can control it, pulverize and acerate it, and avail ourselves of its absorbent power -the power of drawing on the fertilizing gases of the atmosphere. We want inversion, and not merely stirring, our object and intention being to get a depth of what is popularly called soil, fourteen inches at sortment of lumber consists of popularly called soil, fourteen inches, at least, as black and as good, in every partic ular, as the present four or five inches, and to obtain this in the shortest possible time. We want a large reservoir of plant food. -Our practice therefore is to plough with the Double Michigan, for corn, 14 incdes deep. We stimulate in the hill the early growth of the corn in its rather cold seed-bed, but the roots soon find their way down to the surface soil which had been inverted, and before the growing season is over the crop has taken root downward and sprang upward, untouched and unaffected by drought, and yielding heavy returns of bright glazed, heavy, well likeds of agricultural implements, upon reusonaripened ears, as if the roots had been fairly revelling in the profusion of their appropriate food. There are two other great advantages of ploughing 14 inches deep, in guarding against the effects of excessive drought or too much rain, either of which is injurious to the growth of plants. In a very wet season the super-abundant moisture passes down instead of settling at the roots, to their great injury, and the ground, even after heavy rains, can soon be worked. In the event of a severe drought, the roots penetrate the sub-soil for moisture, which is drawn up by capillary attraction, and their growth is not interrupted. In the country where we reside, a friend once complained to us of the trouble he had got himself into by visitors stopping to inquire what was the matter with a certain portion of his cornfield. As an experiment, in a corn-field along the road-side he had caused his men to dig a few feet square to the depth of three feet. A drought ensued that summer, of READING RAIL ROAD. great severity. so that the corn-fields in midsummer, looked as brown as in winter. The stalks were killed, but on the dug portion of the same soil, and in other respects under the same treatment, the corn continued growing through the season without interruption, and the green spot in a desert of dry cornstalks attracted the attention of passers-by to know the reason. In the fall of the year he carefully traced corn roots to the depth of three feet. We have therefore to say that plowing seven inches deep is good, ploughing and sub-soiling is better, and ploughing 14 inches with the Double Michigan and inverting the subsoil is best of all connecting this, however, the first season with the proper use of fertilizers.-Practical Farmer.

· THE CRANBERRY FURORE.

The culture of cranberries in South Jersey is progressing very successfully in the vicinity of the head waters of our creeks and rivers that empty into the inner bays along the sea coast. Within a few years the crops of this berry have more than quadrupled those formerly raised, and still the demand is just as great, while the price is held at the highest figure. It is said that no production of our soil exceeds the profits derived from cranberries, and when we consider that the low, mucky soil adapted to them is unsuited to any other product, we shall scarcely find, in a few years, an idle acre between the Delaware and the sea. A number of "Cranberry Companies" have been formed, some of which are already paying well, and all give promise of a rich reward to those who invest in them.

One is now about forming with a capital of $150,000—the land being a part of the Atsion tract, which will place 1,000 acres under cultivation. The Mechesatauxin River runs through the purchase, and the means of flooding the tract are ample. Persons unsequainted with cranberry raising look upon the present furore as something akin to the morus multicaulis excitement, or the petrolum oil mania-and seem to be very suspicious that our Jerseymen are blowing up another "bubble," but they can dispel their fears. There is something real and tangible in the cranberry fever-visible to the eye and clear to the understanding. The experiment is successfully tested all around us, and the result is before us. To use a common phrase, "there's money in it."- West Jersey Press.

A teacher said to a little girl that was at school, "if a naughty girl should hurt you, like a good little girl you would forgive her, wouldn't you!" "Yes, marm, N. HUDSON, Proprietor. if I couldn't catch her," was the reply.

JAMES R. NICHOLS & CO. Manufacturing Chemists, MANUPACTURERS OF THE ELIXIR PERUVIAN BARK

Protoxide of Iron. Which has become so favorably known as a TONIC AND RESTORATIVE.

By Physicians and invalids in all parts of the coun

The new preparation, "Sursaparilla in combination with Indide of Lime," presents one of the most prompt alterative agents, in a form capable of exerting full action upon the system, and this in minute and pleasant dows. It is conceded that the alterative, resolvent, or tonic effects of ledine are exerted most decidedly when associated with other alterative in combination; and the Sursaparilla seems to fulfill perfectly alt the favorable requisitions.

The first effect usually observed when

"BARSAPAKILLA WITH IODIDE OF LIME" "SARSAPARILLA WITH IODIDE OF LIME" is taken, is an increase of appetite showing that it has tonic properties of a marked character, its alterative effects are manifest in its ready combination with the blood and tissues. Pale, acrofulous women and children improve rapidly under its use, and the vital functions assume a nealthy condition. It is admirably adapted to a large number of chronic or acute affections peculiar to children. It is suited to them both by the midueus and efficiency of medicinal effect and the pleasant, attractive form of the remedy. It may be given for a long period whose constitutional influences are desired, and no repugnance, or disinclination to take the syrap, encountered, in White-Swelings, Ilip-Joint Disease, and Distortions of the Spine, it should be given persistently, in moderate doses, until relief is obtained. In the Spring of the Year, and during the Warm Weather.

the accumulation of morbid matters in the system seems to become manifest and very troublesome Las-situde, Hendache, Boils, Costiveness, Loss of Appetate, Pains in the Joints, Indigestion, etc., are very common. Nothing ever devised is better adapted to exterminate or drive of these affections than this new combination of SARSAVARILLA WIFH IODIDE OF LIME.

We preparation likelt, or which approximates to it as an Alterative, or Blood Parifier, as ever before been placed within the reach of invalids indeed, it is an entirely new and sensy, ric combina-on, in he respect resembling anything hitherto emscription of its chemical character, therap-nite val-ue, manner of use, etc., are given in a circular, which can be had at the store of any and all firstclass Druggists.
